Reviewers may have received some products from the manufacturers for free, which does not influence their review. All opinions are the reviewers' own. Joy Organics uses broad-spectrum and full-spectrum CBD. Most products are USDA certified organic, and when they aren't, the brand states that it sources organic ingredients as much as possible. Product options include ingestible products, such as oils, tinctures, gummies, and softgels, and topicals, such as salves, creams, and bath products. The company claims to use premium-grade United States-grown hemp in its products and guarantees that all products are third-party tested and free from contaminants. Joy Organics includes a certificate of quality assurance with its products. The testing labs are accredited, and results are freely available. Our tester, who preferred to remain anonymous for this test, tried the broad-spectrum CBD oil in tranquil mint, and feels it is best for people looking for only mild effects.

She is used to stronger products. That said, this oil still helped her fall asleep easier, but it was not significantly impactful for anxiety - something that may be better left for a full spectrum or stronger CBD oil. Otherwise the taste and scent were pleasant. "The product had a mild taste with a slight minty flavor. CBD oils I have tried," she says. Cornbread Hemp offers full-spectrum organic CBD products.

It uses hemp flowers from Kentucky to make CBD gummies, oils, topicals, and capsules. The company states that this may make the products more potent than those that use hemp from the whole plant. All Cornbread Hemp products are full spectrum, so they contain up to 2 mg of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) per serving. Cornbread recommends them for stress, recovery, and sleep. Its products have USDA organic certifications, while some are vegan and gluten-free. Buyers can earn reward points on every order, and Cornbread Hemp subscriptions offer discounts of up to 25%. The company also offers a 30-day money-back guarantee and free shipping for those with or without a subscription. Tester Laramy Applekamp recommends Cornbread Hemp CBD Gummies to anyone who wants to use CBD for sleep. Tester Rita Mauceri also found them beneficial for sleep. She usually takes broad-spectrum gummies for daily stress and anxiety but found that taking one 25-mg Cornbread gummy 30 minutes before bed offered a little more strength when she needed it for sleep.

Despite being coated with sugar, testers found they were not super sweet and even a little earthy, which may turn you off if you prefer something sweeter. Chloe Grignon, another tester, wasn't a fan of the taste but did find they helped her feel more relaxed and calm before bed. Both Rita and Chloe agree they helped with relaxation and falling asleep with more ease, but both still experienced some nights where they would wake up in the middle of the night. Other tester highlights include the childproof packaging and the fact that each product includes a QR code you can scan to be taken directly to the certificate of analysis (COA). “I also appreciate how they proudly explain their origins and family-owned status on their packaging. Their shipping was also discreet (if that matters) on the outside of the box, and the inside was fun (and had holiday-colored packaging materials for my December shipment!),” said Laramy.
