

I am a market owner. I own two computer companies. One does commercial work the other is a retail store which services both residential and business. After i look to hire technicians I ask for certifications but ultimately look for practical experience. Whether it is doing work for an actual company doing IT work or just constantly fixing friends computers and or building their own. In case you want to pursue this type of job then experience is your overall friend. Technical colleges are great avenues for getting hands on experience.
