Another issue why Think customer Samsung service center in Moscow are so bad in general is that it really is not trained properly. A good earlier blog I noted breaking down your calls and training each aspect with how one can would like it to be handled which I will not duplicate with its whole. Companies can't think of a call as one lump sum to deal with. It's a lot of small moving parts that all need turn out to be handled in their own individual way. For example, as discussed in the blog, you need to train the rep handles portion of calls when you are aware there will certainly be a long wait/hold times. Teach them how to address this, give them talk off topics. Companies are able at training product and screen knowledge, they aren't very good are training DELIGHT into calls.
