Regardless of whether you're looking for a quirky conversation starter, antique picking drops you into a world of choices.

One of the best parts about buying vintage is the surprise factor. Unlike grabbing cookie-cutter goods, there's no telling what you'll run across. Maybe it's a 1970s lava lamp or a reclaimed leather jacket — each holding its own history.

When selecting a vintage gift, consider the gift-getter's vibe. Are they mad about classic décor? Do they love finding old cameras? This makes it easier to focus your hunt and ensure your gift lands just right.

Quality is king when buying vintage. Always look over items for flaws and find out about their provenance if possible. A little patina can lend authenticity, but major faults can spoil the item's appeal or usability.

Another hint: shop widely. Independent antique stores are rich hunting grounds, but remember to look at specialist websites like Chairish for quirky collectibles. Big-name retailers such as Pottery Barn also offer select Retro Gifts official store (find out here)-influenced pieces that blend well in a modern home.

Timing matters
