Balancing them is impossible. I should be paid well enough to support my family, yet I don't want to be robbed when making an application for healthcare policies. This is where private industry can step ascending. Healthcare shouldn't cost so much to the needs of folks. Without going into great detail, healthcare companies have very much figured out how to "pool" their members to avoid a catastrophic trend of insurance claims that would bankrupt both of them. Therefore, why does it cost such great? Employers already bear most of the burden for their employees when contributing towards their insurance costs. The answer seems pretty obvious to me: Present-day insurance companies are top heavy.

Hospital resources such as beds, operating theatres and delivery suites can be established well in advance, based to the number of patients. This would help cut down the dependence on an emergency bed dissatisfaction with the fourth department.
