

(Image: <https://www.prodiscgolf.cz/cache/images/full/20195--eagle-zluta.jpg>) Note: This episode addresses matters notably sensitive in gentle of this week's school shooting in Texas. While Design Observer has never shied away from difficult conversations, the editors acknowledge that this content may be difficult for some listeners. Content Warning: Violence, killing, and demise are mentioned in this episode. It would be hard to search out somebody who desires to share area with a mosquito. Hence, the creation of the bug zapper. But as designers, how will we handle what lives and what doesn't? On this episode of The Futures Archive Lee Moreau and Sloan Leo go deep on how human-centered design doesn't at all times mirror humanity. With extra insights from David MacNeal, Juliano Morimoto, indoor-outdoor zapper Spee Kosloff, Paula Antonelli, and Lindsay Garcia. There is a necessity for humans to exert their authority, however there can also be a need for us to exert our love. The thing that I hope we hold house for is: This is all observe because it's not going to be resolved, and it shouldn't be.

external page That might create some type of stagnancy. Life is actually about holding space for dynamism, modifications and cycles. Lee Moreau is President of Other Tomorrows, a design and patio insect zapper innovation consultancy primarily based in Boston, and a Professor of Practice in Design at Northeastern University. Sloan Leo (they/he) is a Community Design theorist, educator, and pest control practitioner. They are the founder of FLOX Studio, a neighborhood design and technique studio. David MacNeal is a author and the creator of Bugged: The Insects Who Rule the World and the People Obsessive about Them. Dr. Juliano Morimoto is an entomologist and lecturer on the University of Aberdeen in Scotland. Spee Kosloff is an associate professor of psychology at California State University in Fresno and co-author of "Killing Begets Killing: Evidence From a Bug-Killing Paradigm That Initial Killing Fuels Subsequent Killing". Paola Antonelli is an creator, indoor-outdoor zapper architect, and the Senior Curator indoor-outdoor zapper in the Department of Architecture and Zap Zone Defender Design at the Museum of Modern Art, Zone Defender in addition to MoMA's founding director of Research and Development.

Lindsay Garcia is an artist, scholar, and an assistant dean at Brown University. Kathleen Fu created the illustrations for every episode. A big due to this season's sponsor, Automattic. Hi, everybody, this is Lee. Every week is a little completely different on this show. And this week, while we're nonetheless talking about design, we're going to be speaking about some pretty serious issues. And so I want to verify that everyone who's listening is aware of that's in a great place when they're listening. And i encourage you to verify our show notes prior to listening to the episode so you perceive the context of what we're talking about and put together ourselves a bit. Beyond that, I welcome you to the dialog and i hope you discover this conversation as highly effective because it was for us. And that i thank you for listening. Welcome to The Futures Archive, a present about human centered design where this season, we'll take an object, search for the human at the center and keep asking questions.

... and I am Sloan Leo. On each episode we're going to start with an object with energy. Today the article is the bug indoor-outdoor zapper. We'll look at the historical past of that object from our perspective, indoor-outdoor zapper as designers who've completed work in human centered design. Not simply the way it appears to be like and feels and sounds and smells, but in addition the connection between that object and the people it was designed for... ... and with different humans too. The Futures Archive is brought to you by the design staff at Automattic. Later on, indoor-outdoor zapper we'll hear from Vanessa Riley Thurman, a member of Automattic's Designer Experience Team. Sloan Leo, it's wonderful to see you once more. Thanks for joining us. Lee, it is a thrill to be here. So I'm wondering-for Zap Zone Defender this specific episode, I'm wondering if you possibly can tell me a bit bit about your historical past as a child with bugs and insects. Where you this sort of like, like kid that like beloved the creepy crawly stuff?

Last update: 2025/08/13 22:31 the_futu_es_a_chive_s2e6:the_bug_zappe http://nccproduction.com/wiki/the_futu_es_a_chive_s2e6:the_bug_zappe?rev=1755138685

From:

<http://nccproduction.com/wiki/> - NCC Production

Permanent link:

http://nccproduction.com/wiki/the_futu_es_a_chive_s2e6:the_bug_zappe?rev=1755138685

Last update: 2025/08/13 22:31