One more issue with c-bet. It had a wholly different message for players at the tables some years ago. Ahead of the online poker boom, c-bet was a very simple way of earning money. Most players just folded for the bet belonging to the preflop aggressor on the flop. Should made a continuation bet, your opponent only made the call if he hit the flop. In the last years as poker players improved their skills, c-bet lost a lot of its cherish. Players do not give much respect anymore to the preflop aggressor and functions of check-raises on the flop against c-bets. This is exactly why you needn't make a c-bet on every flop because the other players will learn your patterns and positive if you face many check-raises.
